Integrating STI and HIV Prevention into the SBIRT Model

Presented by Lisa Connors

Thursday, December 19, 2019 @ 1:00-2:30pm ET (12CT/11MT/10PT)

Based on the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), adolescents and young adults account for half of all sexually transmitted infections (STIs). This accounts for about 20 million new sexually transmitted infections in the United States per year. This webinar will discuss high-risk sexual behaviors among adolescents. Statistical data and the latest STIs and HIV trends among adolescents will be shared in the webinar. Information will be shared about barriers and missed opportunities for screening adolescents for sexually transmitted infections and HIV. The integration of the SBIRT Model will be demonstrated in the webinar, to also include Motivational Interviewing. This webinar will also challenge clinicians, practitioners, and counselors to have conversations with their adolescent clients to minimize the stigma of STIs and HIV, to normalize the importance of discussing sex and sexuality, and to motivate clients to use preventive measures to avoid the transmission of STIs and HIV.
